

Project Manager – Job Description

Job Overview:

For a young challenging start-up company, in the field of artificial intelligence (AI) in drug discovery we are currently seeking a PhD in biomedical science as a project leader.

Location: Center/Tel Aviv.

Responsibilities:

- Project leadership – takes responsibility for understanding the basic level the science, performing the experiments (at the first step), and translating it into a commercial invention
- Project planning – documents at a high level an industrial standard the major objectives and milestones associated with a project and works with scientific/technical team lead(s) to map out tasks and timelines to achieve the goals.
- Project communication – establishes and coordinates the events and methods associated with communicating project information.
- Project delivery – provides ongoing monitoring and documentation of objectives, priorities, resources, decision points, and sponsor satisfaction.
- Project administration – accounting activities associated with projects, including monthly reporting as required for grants accounting and services billing

Qualifications and Skills:

- Ph.D. in biomedical science
 - Ability to bridge between basic science to translational research
 - Vast experience molecular and cell culture
 - Experience in CRISPR methodologies in mammalian cells
- 4+ years of Experience in preclinical drug discovery in the industry a biotechnology or pharmaceutical company.
- Previous experience in project management
- Familiarity with preclinical drug discovery
- Creative thinking and a "can-do" attitude.
- Excellent time management and organizational skills
- Outstanding written and oral communication

CV should be sent to: adi@sanaraventures.com