

NanoDrops VP R&D Job Description

Job Overview:

For a young and challenging bio-convergence start-up company in the field of ophthalmology we are currently seeking a VP R&D. As VP R&D, you will bring strong practical experience of project management in a rapidly evolving, cross-functional, highly regulated environment. This role also requires strong cross-functional business acumen, including technical, manufacturing, finance, quality, clinical, and regulatory-based knowledge.

Location: Ra'anana/Bar Ilan University.

Responsibilities:

- Development work that integrates life science with system engineering, architecture design, work with subcontractors and consultants
- Ongoing management of the development - planning, executing, monitoring and controlling the development processes
- Directly responsible for the establishing and managing the operating budget
- Work with medical Quality and Regulatory Assurance environment to ensure products are developed and validated in a manner that complies with global regulatory requirements
- Characterization and definition of the product with the developers and the company's board of directors
- Drive all R&D aspects of Intellectual Property (IP) portfolio
- Manage university and other external research collaborations

Qualifications and Skills:

- Advanced degree in medical engineering or exact sciences
- A minimum of 10+ years of related work experience in the healthcare field
- A minimum of 5 years in managerial capacity in multidisciplinary projects
- Strong operational and project management skills
- Solid understanding of technical development issues, with experience in product design, development and manufacture, and understanding in design controls regulatory requirements (US, EU, Other) and experience defending product information or processes in a regulatory audit preferred
- Agile and innovative in spirit
- Excellent time management and organizational skills
- Outstanding written and oral communication
- Advantage in working knowledge in sales, marketing and operations

CV should be sent to: adi@sanaraventures.com